

Keep safe from drowning

Babies and young children can drown even in a few centimetres of bath water.

Teach children how to swim at a young age.

Supervise children at all times when they are in or near water.

Rescue devices such as a lifebuoy should be available by a pool or on a boat.

Lifejackets should be worn when on a boat and flotation devices by young children near water.

Teach children to keep away from drains as hair, limbs or bathing suits may get caught.

Pools should be closed off by a fence to prevent young children from drowning.

Be aware of children with a medical condition who may be at higher risk of drowning.